Section A: "Now I Know My A B C's"

Exhibit 1: A is for apples (and A+ is for peaches) at Jackson's Orchard!

Jackson's Orchard is a local business owned by Bill and Shirley Jackson since 1966. A tree planting program was begun in 1966 and continues to this day. Jackson's Orchard sells the same quality of trees to customers through their greenhouse and the business continues to be run by family, including Bill Jackson who hosts free workshops on pruning. Pruning is an important practice needed for home or commercial fruit tree production. The workshop teaches home gardeners how to correctly prune several fruit trees like apple and peach in order to boost production. Bill also discusses a safe and proper spraying program to protect your trees from pests and disease. In 2023, Bill, who has been a member of Kentucky Horticulture Society for 58 years, received the Dr. John Strang Award. The honor is bestowed upon fruit and vegetable growers who have contributed greatly to the horticulture industry here in Kentucky. The orchard boasts 7,000 trees, so the Jackson family and their employees are skilled in the apple and peach production which includes their pruning and spraying program.

Exhibit 2: "B is for Bees" – Simon Apiaries located in Alvaton, Kentucky is owned by Julie and Andy Simon. Their business produces local honey which may help with seasonal allergies by building your natural immunities to pollen and reduced allergy symptoms. They have between four and five hundred hives which are home to 1,500,000 bees! Those bees depend on wildflowers and other nectar plants for food, but they also help local farmers by pollinating their crops. Julie travels to area elementary schools with her enclosed live hive to keep students engaged in learning about pollination and the importance of bees in our world. Exhibited presented by Simon Apiaries.
